

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Saturday, November 18, 2006
Opinion
Letters to the editor

American Education Week

On behalf of the staff, students and parents at Richard Milburn Academy, I would like to thank the Lubbock community for continuing to support our public charter high school.

This week (Nov. 11-18) the nation observes American Education Week, a celebration of public schools, the students who attend them and the individuals who contribute to their success. Richard Milburn Academy is proud to be one of the many public schools providing quality educational services to Lubbock students.

All children are entitled to a public education that prepares them for college, a job or other future goals. Since 1999, we have helped to ensure that students who prefer a smaller, non-traditional learning environment are able to earn their diploma in a public school setting.

As this year's AEW theme illustrates, great public schools are a right and a responsibility; RMA takes the responsibility of providing that right to students very seriously and remains committed to making sure that no child is left behind.

Please join RMA in celebrating American Education Week and public schools. We invite you to visit our school to learn about our public charter program and the success it helps students achieve.

STARLETTE GILL/Lubbock

School Director